Ping pong is officially having a moment. With Marty Supreme bringing table tennis back into the cultural conversation, the once-humble game has reemerged as a stylish, social pastime with unexpected wellness appeal. Equal parts cardio, coordination, and cognitive workout, ping pong offers a low-pressure way to move, connect, and play with no intimidating learning curve required. From sun-soaked resorts to storied European hideaways, luxury hotels are leaning into the revival, offering the game as a playful amenity that blends movement and mindfulness, while inviting a little friendly rivalry.

Vik Chile

Vik Chile, the striking retreat, and the remarkable VIK Vineyard and Winery (recently named the #1 Vineyard in the World by World's 50 Best Vineyards) are the foundation of the VIK. Perched atop a hill in Chile's Millahue Valley with the Andes rising in the distance, the 11,000-acre property blends bold design, art, and world-class winemaking. Vik

Chile features uniquely designed suites and bungalows adorned with site-specific artworks by Chilean and international artists. The retreat is also home to a game room where guests can play table tennis as a playful way to connect and unwind between horseback rides through the vineyards, mountain biking excursions, or private wine tastings led by international experts, among other activities.

Estancia Vik

Set on 4,000 acres of rolling Uruguayan countryside, Estancia Vik is a romantic, rustic ranch in José Ignacio where “Marlboro Country” meets laid-back St. Tropez. Housed within a Spanish colonial style estancia with white adobe walls and a red tin roof, the retreat features just 12 individually designed suites, each featuring site-specific artworks throughout. Known for its immersive, activity-driven guest experience, Estancia Vik offers gaucho-led horseback rides across the pampas, polo lessons, authentic Uruguayan asados, and outdoor adventures. Guests can also gather in the game room for a friendly match of ping pong.
